Calling 9-1-1 Safety Tips

Try to remain calm and speak clearly giving the 911 operator the nature of your call immediately. When you call you will be asked a lot of questions by the 911 operator. It is important that they be able to give the responding personnel as much information as possible.

Be prepared to provide the following information:

- Location of emergency
- Your location (if different)
- Name, home address and telephone number
- Details of the emergency (keep details short and to the point)
- If medical emergency; condition of the subject (sex, age, medical complaint or condition, are they breathing and conscious, any information on drugs or alcohol they may have used.
- If fire emergency; what is on fire? (Structure, vehicle, vegetation, trash)
- Details, names, descriptions of persons, property, or vehicles involved in the incident
- Any other information requested by the 911 operators.

Follow the instructions of the 911 operators unless doing so would put you or others in danger. When faced with an emergency a few moments can seem like a lifetime when you are waiting for help. The questions asked by the 911 operators may seem unimportant but they are necessary to provide the best response for your situation. Often, emergency personnel are already responding as the 911 operators obtain further information.

Remain on the line until the 911 operator tells you to release the line. If you are unable to remain on the line or talk to the 911 operator do not hang up the phone. Even if you cannot talk, leave the phone line open. They are carefully listening to what is going on and may ask you yes and no questions which you can either answer or push the buttons on the phone for an answer. Follow instructions given to you, such as meeting the officer at the door or flagging down the firefighters at the curb.
